INTRODUCTION

25X1

This report is based on photography and is a supplement to [redacted] May 1969, China-Burma Border Area, Military and Logistics Study. It is concerned with that area of China within 100 nautical miles (nm) of the Burma border and includes a comprehensive study of the road network and the possible telecommunications network, an update on targets which have reflected a change since the original report, and any new targets not included in the initial report.

This report follows the same criteria and format set forth in the initial study. All numbers correspond to the facilities included in the initial report and continue in sequence, north to south, for new or additional facilities.

The possible telecommunications traces are annotated on maps in each of the areas. The small scale of photography precludes a positive identification as to whether the traces are related to telecommunications lines or powerlines. There may be more possible telecommunications lines than those annotated on the maps, but the nature of the photography precludes their identification.

BASIC DESCRIPTION

Area 1 contains that portion of China north of 25-30N and within 100 nm of the Burma border. The main roads in this area are Route 19 (the Burma Road), which runs generally west from Kunming into the area of study; Route 401, which runs north from Hsiakuan; and Route 204, which runs across the northern portion of the search area. Route 204 was improved between [REDACTED]. There are no road crossings into Burma from Area 1; however, Route 4002 runs parallel to the border for 46 nm. Seven new facilities and one facility reflecting change are reported in Area 1.

AREA 1, ROAD NETWORK

Route 204 runs generally east-west across the top of the area of study and enters the area on the east at 29-46N 099-00E and the west at 30-10N 097-25E. In [REDACTED] the road was in good condition from the eastern edge to 29-43N 098-49E and in poor condition and undergoing improvement from there to the western edge. The reconstruction was completed in [REDACTED] and the road was in good condition. There has been no subsequent coverage.

Route 7 runs south along the northwest edge of the area of study and enters the area at 29-03N 097-22E and 28-37N 097-22E. The road is in fair-to-good condition; there has been no major change since [REDACTED].

Route 401 runs north from Hsiakuan (25-36N 100-13E) to the edge of the area of study at 29-04N 099-51E. The road is in fair-to-good condition; there has been no major change since [REDACTED]. An unnumbered road runs northwest from Route 401 at 27-50N 099-43E to 28-58N 098-38E. This road is in good condition; there has been no major change since [REDACTED].

Route 341 runs generally northwest from its junction with Route 401 at 26-52N 099-58E to 27-13N 099-17E. The road is in fair-to-good condition; there has been no major change since [REDACTED].

Route 4002 runs generally north from 25-27N 099-15E, parallel to the Burma border, to 26-37N 098-54E. The road is in good condition; there has been no major change since [REDACTED].

Route 4046 runs north from its intersection with Route 19 at 25-36N 099-19E to 26-03N 099-19E. [REDACTED] the terminus was at 25-54N 099-20E. [REDACTED] the road was being improved over its entire length and being extended to its present terminus at 26-03N 099-19E.

Portions of Routes 19, 4043, and 4044 are in this area, but most of their alignments fall in Area 2 and are described in that portion of this report.
